Dear Better Swag hiring team,

I am applying for the Growth Marketer (Social & Email) role. A fast-growing, tech-forward swag company that has just rebranded and now needs its social and email programs to catch up is exactly where I want to move fast, learn in public, and prove impact. Growth across social and email, sharp writing, and turning customer wins into stories is the intersection I have been building my career around.

As Community Manager I owned the social presence of local brands across three summer seasons, and at BBVA I run daily CRM operations and own the customer relationship end to end. Here is how my profile maps to what you need:

- Social & email execution: planned and shipped content on Instagram and Facebook while running daily CRM work, the two channels this role owns.
- Strong writer, test-and-learn: conversion-oriented copy for brand campaigns, iterating on angles and doubling down on what works.
- Self-starter with a tool-forward edge: I use AI tools such as Claude Code to prototype content and run experiments faster, and Google Data Analytics to back decisions with numbers.

I am honest about my starting point: I have not yet run influencer partnerships or scaled a post-rebrand growth program, and my email-series work so far lives inside CRM rather than a dedicated platform. What I bring is real social and copywriting execution, a genuine growth mindset, English to collaborate globally, and a proven ability to turn ambiguity into shipped work while learning fast, the pace a small, agile team needs.

I am based in Mar del Plata and fully set up to work remotely. I would love to help Better Swag get more of the right people to find you, follow you, and become customers.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Bianca Dondero
