Dear CrucialPoint hiring team,

I am applying for the Argentina Email Marketing Manager role. The way you describe your work, results-driven retention programs built on Email, SMS and lifecycle for ecommerce brands, grounded in Klaviyo and analytics, is exactly the direction I am building my career in: customer retention, backed by data rather than intuition.

At BBVA I run daily CRM operations and own the customer relationship with a clear focus on retention; alongside work I am completing the Google Data Analytics Professional Certificate and self-studying Klaviyo and email so I can turn metrics into decisions. Here is how my profile maps to what you need:

- Retention & CRM: daily CRM operations for over 100 customers per week, prioritising retention and lifetime value over single transactions.
- Data to action: SQL, spreadsheets and visualisation to read open rate, CTR, engagement and conversion, and recommend evidence-backed optimisations.
- Email & content: conversion-oriented copy and content calendars for brand campaigns; self-study of Klaviyo flows and HTML/CSS, practised with Claude Code as an AI pair-programmer.

I want to be honest about my starting point: this is a Manager-level posting and I am earlier in my career, without three years of hands-on Klaviyo or agency ecommerce experience yet. What I bring is a genuine retention and CRM foundation, real copywriting practice, English to work with clients directly, and a proven ability to learn fast while working and studying in parallel, exactly the pace an agency serving diverse ecommerce clients demands.

I am based in Mar del Plata, Argentina, and fully set up to work remotely. I would be glad to bring data-driven, customer-focused, consistent execution to your retention team, in whatever scope fits my current level.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Bianca Dondero
