Dear Talent Global hiring team,

I am applying for the Email Marketing Specialist role supporting your venture studio's health and wellness brands. The way you frame the work, owning lifecycle email across multiple e-commerce brands and turning flows into a revenue channel, is exactly the direction I am building my career in: retention and customer lifecycle, grounded in data.

At BBVA I run daily CRM operations and own the customer relationship with a clear focus on retention; alongside work I am completing the Google Data Analytics Professional Certificate to turn metrics into decisions. Here is how my profile maps to what you need:

- Retention & CRM: daily CRM operations for over 100 customers per week, prioritising retention and experience over single transactions.
- Lifecycle focus: self-study on Klaviyo and the core flows, Welcome, Abandoned Cart, Post-Purchase and Win-back, plus segmentation and A/B testing read through open rate, CTR and conversion.
- Design & copy: conversion-oriented copy and on-brand visual assets in Canva, and I use Claude Code to draft and iterate campaign copy and analysis faster.

I want to be honest about my starting point: I am early in my career and do not yet have five years leading email teams, hands-on Klaviyo campaigns at scale, or Figma design as a daily tool. What I bring is a solid retention and CRM foundation, real copywriting and Canva practice, advanced English to collaborate globally, and a proven ability to learn fast, I work, study a Marketing degree and certify in analytics in parallel, which is the pace a multi-brand studio needs.

I am based in Mar del Plata and fully set up to work remotely across flexible time zones. I would be glad to bring data-driven, customer-focused, consistent execution to a team scaling wellness brands from inception to global expansion.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Bianca Dondero
