Dear DEPT hiring team,

I am applying for the Associate, Paid Social role in Mar del Plata. This is the production side of marketing I want to build my career on: campaign builds, account tasks and optimisations, creative trafficking, and the weekly and monthly reports that tell the team what to do next. I am also writing because of where the role sits. I live in Mar del Plata, so the roughly one day a week in your office here is not a compromise for me, it is the setup I have been looking for.

What I can take off your account team's hands from day one is the execution layer. As Community Manager I ran the social channels of local brands across three consecutive summer seasons, planning calendars, building and scheduling posts in Meta Business Suite, trafficking creative produced in Canva and reporting on how each piece performed. At BBVA I handle over 50 customer queries per week on the bank's CRM, which is detail-heavy production work where a single wrong field breaks the process.

- Campaign production: hands-on experience assembling, scheduling and shipping social content to a fixed calendar, with organised asset and version handling.
- Reporting and data: SQL, spreadsheets and data visualisation from the Google Data Analytics Professional Certificate, applied to metrics such as reach, engagement, CTR and enquiries generated.
- Communication: advanced English for daily work with colleagues abroad, plus a UTN diploma in oral communication for clear meeting notes and follow-ups.

I will be straight with you about the gap: I have not yet managed paid budgets, bidding or testing in Meta Ads Manager in a professional setting, so my paid social knowledge is channel and platform familiarity rather than hands-on media buying. What I bring instead is real Meta channel execution, comfort with numbers and reporting, and a track record of learning demanding systems quickly, from a bank's CRM to a certificate in data analytics completed alongside a full-time job and a marketing degree.

I would like to grow into paid social inside a team where the standards are set by people who do this at scale, and to be in the room in Mar del Plata while I do it.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Bianca Dondero
