Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the CRM & Sales Operations Specialist role. This position is described as owning the top-of-funnel data lifecycle, and that is precisely the kind of work I do every day: I operate BBVA Argentina's CRM and internal systems, where a duplicated, stale or misclassified record is not a cosmetic problem but an operational one.

Xometry is interesting to me because the data problem here has real scale behind it. Since acquiring Thomas in 2021, Xometry has added roughly 1.4 million registered buyers and around 500,000 sellers to its marketplace, and a prospect database of that size does not stay clean on its own. Someone has to define the criteria, run the cleanup, and hold the line so Account Executives receive lists they can actually sell into. That is the job I want.

What I would bring to your top-of-funnel operation:

- Daily CRM discipline: I keep contact records, interaction history and classifications accurate inside a banking CRM while resolving over 50 queries a week, so data integrity is a habit for me, not a policy I was handed.
- Spreadsheets and SQL for list work: I am completing the Google Data Analytics Professional Certificate, which is built around exactly these mechanics: cleaning and deduplicating messy datasets, joining sources, querying with SQL, and segmenting records against defined criteria such as an ICP.
- Volume without loss of precision: over 100 customers guided per week under fixed compliance rules. Bulk enrichment and list pulls reward the same trait, consistency at scale.
- A marketing reading of the data: I am studying Marketing and have worked on conversion-oriented digital campaigns, so I evaluate a list by whether it converts, not only by whether it is tidy.

One thing I want to state plainly rather than let you discover it: I have not worked in Salesforce, ZoomInfo or LinkedIn Sales Navigator, so I would come in learning that stack while contributing immediately on data quality, segmentation, spreadsheets and CRM process.

One practical question: the role is listed for Greater Buenos Aires and I am based in Mar del Plata, so could you confirm whether it is open to a remote or hybrid arrangement?

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how I can help keep your lead flow clean and moving.

Kind regards,

Bianca Dondero
