Dear Nectar Life hiring team,

I am writing about the Growth Marketing Manager role covering paid media and Klaviyo. I already do the paid-media and AI-creative parts of that job on a smaller scale at Mar del Plata Digital, and I am now taking the Klaviyo Practitioner certification to build the lifecycle side.

Nectar Life already gives a retention marketer a lot to work with: Subscribe & Save, Rewards, Refer a Friend and bundle offers like Buy 2, Get 2 are each a natural trigger for a welcome, replenishment or win-back flow. Products made fresh daily by employees who care deeply also give ad creative something real to show.

Here is how my background maps to what the role needs:

- Paid media: I audited the Google Ads and Meta Ads Manager campaigns that had been running unmanaged, ran the paid Meta campaign for the Pulpo Gestión launch, and report spend and results to leadership every week.
- AI-generated creative and automation: I built the content pipeline for 30 weekly posts in Claude Code, including code-animated short-form Reels, and refine every piece for brand accuracy before it goes out. Publishing itself runs on the Meta API: 10 Facebook pages and 4 Instagram accounts are scheduled and posted automatically.
- CRM and retention foundations: I segmented a 1,500-plus contact base into six segments with an offer for each and sent the first email campaign to it myself, which is what showed me why flows like welcome, cart abandonment and win-back belong in Klaviyo.

The gap I want to name directly is scope: the role calls for 3+ years of hands-on Meta Ads Manager work on ecommerce or DTC brands, plus demonstrated Klaviyo expertise with revenue attribution. My paid-media and CRM work started in July 2026 for a services group, not a DTC ecommerce brand, and Klaviyo is still in active learning, not production flows. What I bring instead is hands-on ownership of live Meta and Google campaigns, an AI-creative pipeline I built myself, and a self-started Klaviyo certification.

On availability: I am remote-based in Argentina (UTC-3), and my current part-time commitments end by 3pm Argentina time (10am Pacific), leaving the four-hour overlap you need with 9am-5pm Pacific open. I hold two part-time roles alongside this work and am glad to talk through how that fits the role's full-time structure.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Bianca Dondero
