Dear Fever CRM team,

I am writing about the Senior CRM Specialist role. Turning first-time users into loyal, returning customers is exactly the work that draws me: at BBVA I run daily operations on the bank's CRM with a clear focus on retention and customer experience, and I want to bring that focus to a company built around lifecycle and engagement.

Here is how my experience maps to what the CRM team does:

- Retention on CRM: I manage daily CRM operations and orient over 100 customers per week through digital-channel adoption, prioritising retention and experience across web and mobile.
- Insight-driven decisions: I am completing the Google Data Analytics Professional Certificate (SQL, spreadsheets, visualisation) so that segmentation and campaign results are measured and acted on, not guessed.
- Multi-channel copy: across three seasons I planned, wrote and published conversion-oriented content on Instagram and Facebook for local brands.

Fever's mission to democratise access to culture and entertainment is what makes this role compelling. Formats like the Candlelight concert series turn a single event into a reason to come back, and that is precisely where a strong CRM programme earns its keep: mapping the customer lifecycle, segmenting audiences and personalising every touchpoint so first-time attendees become regulars.

I will be honest about fit: my hands-on experience with Salesforce Marketing Cloud, ESPs and HTML email is still developing, and my CRM work so far has been operational and retention-focused rather than a full multi-channel campaign remit. What I bring is genuine retention and customer-data experience, fast learning across tools, and the analytical grounding to grow quickly into the platform side. I am proactive, organised and comfortable at a high pace, and I would welcome the chance to prove it.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,
