Bianca Dondero

biancadondero@gmail.com | +54 223 583-5084 | LinkedIn

October 20, 2026

Dear Canonical Marketing team,

I am applying for the Marketing Associate role, remote globally. Your posting says the foundational marketing knowledge you need can come from a degree, internships or personal projects, so let me lead with mine: I have built and shipped three web products of my own, end to end, with Claude Code.

One of them answers the GTM support line in your day-to-day list directly. Since July 2026 I have owned go-to-market for Pulpo Gestión, a new AI agent for WhatsApp and email at Mar del Plata Digital: positioning, pricing, the landing page and the paid campaign that drives it, with no brief and no manager. The 12-week plan is still in its early weeks, so I will not hand you invented numbers; what I can hand you is the work itself, happening now.

Here is how the rest of the role maps to what I already do:

- Tech curiosity, not a claim: three production apps on Vercel, built with Claude Code in Next.js, Astro, TypeScript and Tailwind, two of them running the Gemini API and one querying real BigQuery data.
- Analytical thinking: SQL through module 5 of the Google Data Analytics Professional Certificate, and the ERP segmentation behind Mar del Plata Digital's 6 customer segments, each with its own offer and sequence.
- Storytelling: Vidriera, my own marketing news portal with an editorial line across 6 categories, and conversion-oriented copy written for three summer seasons to generate enquiries, not just reach.
- Campaign coordination: auditing and rebuilding Google Ads and Meta campaigns with conversions measured in GA4, and coordinating AI-assisted content across 13 brands at once.

One gap, named plainly: I am in active, self-directed learning on Klaviyo, not experienced with it yet, building on the email and CRM fundamentals I already run daily.

Canonical has been fully remote since 2004, and a founder-led, profitable company that still moves at that pace is the kind of place where a self-starter gets real scope fast. I work in native Spanish and advanced English, and I am ready to start contributing from day one.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Bianca Dondero